AGRICULTURAL HYMN. reat God of Eden! 'twas thy That first clad carth in bloom And shed upon the smiling land Nature's first rich perfume.

Fresh as thy glance the flowers sprang, Kiesed by the sun's first rays— While plain and hill, and valley rang Wish life, and joy and praise.

You of the clouds! thy hands can ope The fountains of the s'y; And on the expectant thinky crop, Pour down the rich supply,

The farmer, when the seed time's o'er, Joys in the mercies given.— Thinks of thy promised harvest's store, And, smiling, leaks to heaven...

God of the sheaff to thee a'one Are due our thanks and praise; then harvest's grateful labor's de On plenty, glad we gaze.

Then shell our thoughts on heaven rest, Thy grace, we will adore, And think that God, whose mercy bleat Our basket and our store.

PLOWERS

Each leafic is a may seroil,
Insectibed with holy traudy.
A lesson that formed the least,
Should keep the deers of youth;
In grey by way left,
Mowwere the gant of glayy shoun J
Were it of flowers betefit!

They tremble on the Alpine heights, They tremble on the Alpine heights, The featured rock they press, The desert wild with heat and sands. Shares too their olessedners. And wheresoft the westy heart Turns in its deep despair, The meek eyed bissons upward looks, Inviting it to proper.
