THE NAUVOO NEIGHBOR.

Volume—No. 4.

Nauvoo, Hancock County, Ill., Wednesday, Feb. 21, 1844.

Whole Number 35.

Vol. III.

Neander.—No account of London.-The Times reporter, in speaking of the Neander Family, says: 'The firm continuance by the Neander Family of their seat in the Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral is very remarkable, and is attended with an amount of detail and variety which is not often met with in London families. The Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral is a great deal of a place, and the family has a large number of residents, and is attended with a large number of duties, and a great number of important duties, which are performed by the Neander Family. The Neander Family has a large number of members in the Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral, and is attended with a large number of duties, and a great number of important duties, which are performed by the Neander Family.'

The firm continuance by the Neander Family of their seat in the Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral is very remarkable, and is attended with an amount of detail and variety which is not often met with in London families. The Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral is a great deal of a place, and the family has a large number of residents, and is attended with a large number of duties, and a great number of important duties, which are performed by the Neander Family. The Neander Family has a large number of members in the Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral, and is attended with a large number of duties, and a great number of important duties, which are performed by the Neander Family.'

The firm continuance by the Neander Family of their seat in the Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral is very remarkable, and is attended with an amount of detail and variety which is not often met with in London families. The Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral is a great deal of a place, and the family has a large number of residents, and is attended with a large number of duties, and a great number of important duties, which are performed by the Neander Family. The Neander Family has a large number of members in the Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral, and is attended with a large number of duties, and a great number of important duties, which are performed by the Neander Family.'

The firm continuance by the Neander Family of their seat in the Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral is very remarkable, and is attended with an amount of detail and variety which is not often met with in London families. The Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral is a great deal of a place, and the family has a large number of residents, and is attended with a large number of duties, and a great number of important duties, which are performed by the Neander Family. The Neander Family has a large number of members in the Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral, and is attended with a large number of duties, and a great number of important duties, which are performed by the Neander Family.'

The firm continuance by the Neander Family of their seat in the Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral is very remarkable, and is attended with an amount of detail and variety which is not often met with in London families. The Chantry of St. Paul's Cathedral is a great deal of a place, and the family has a large number of residents, and is attended with a large number of duties, and a great number of important duties, which are performed by the Neander Family.
THE NEIGHBOR.

PACIFIC INDIANS.

The school, which Governor Findlay has been instrumental in establishing, is now in a flourishing condition. The pounds of corn and beans have been scattered over the ground, and the boys are busy in gathering them. The girls are engaged in preparing the meal. It is a sight to see the children, under the guidance of their teacher, picking up the scattered grains of corn and beans. They are taught to labor, and the teacher is careful to see that they are well fed. The children are healthy, and the school is well cared for. The government has provided a teacher for the school, and the children are happy and contented. The teacher is a gentle and kindly woman, and the children love her. The school is a place of refuge for the injured and the neglected, and the children are happy and contented. The government has provided for the school, and the children are happy and contented. The teacher is a gentle and kindly woman, and the children love her. The school is a place of refuge for the injured and the neglected, and the children are happy and contented. The teacher is a gentle and kindly woman, and the children love her.