This fact bark moved on.
This passed the merry tosat around,
Where ground the, board beneat,
there,
Then have the marry boast around,

theer,
Then tang the merry burst of joy,
Like music failing on the ear.
Of there were eyes that sparkled bright,
Among that age and happy throng,
And hearts that bounded, high and light,
Mid wit and mirth, and joyous song.

A wall upon the waters;
A foud and piercing cry
Is min fied with a booming sound
That echors through the sky!
A shi wer of human blood is now
High on the peanons apread,
And over the shattered deck is strewn
The delivered the deat And o'er the shattered occas as are no.
The dying and the dead.
Then rose the loud and bitter wall,
The cry of agony.
As when a woman vents her greif
Over sights which rend the heart to see Amidst that stricken band,

Amidit that stricken bond,
Whose sighs and tears were blen',
Two blooming maids, 'in anguish tones,
'A faither' fate lament:
And mingle with the cries that plerce
The hot subplureous'sir.
The shrikes of costhiess, boundless grief,
'And harrowing despair,
But there is one who feels the point
Of sprow's spear more keen than they
Who slake beneath a heavier weight
Of diep, heart-rending agony.

She site npon the dock.

She site npon the dock.

In silent, tearless wo,
Wer bosom rent with pange or grief
Which nose but she can know,
Dishevelide from her merble brow,
Her silken har is flung.
But the last kind drop of southing grief
Laf from its fountain wrung,
