ELECTION.

We have heard from only four preachers—the "Old Citizens" and "Orderly Citizens," is about 1800 ahead, and will be elected by a large majority. Official returns next week.

The editor (Mr. Taylor) is fast recovering from his wounds received in the jail in Chicago, on the 27th June, at the time the Gen. Smiths were murdered.

Dr. Jones—On Sunday the 4th inst. two sons of James Cummings of this city, named Hiram and Josiah, and aged 19 and 17 years, were drowned in the Mississippi near the upper stone quarry while swimming.

Death delights in this element to prey upon life among the careless. Be wared.

A "Appeal to Arms," we appeal to the majesty of the law, and will be content with whatever judgement it shall award, and while the law falls, we leave the matter with God. [N. Y. True Sun.]

A Dreadful Steamboat Explosion.—The Baltimore Patriot of last Friday evening contains a letter, dated at Rio de Janeiro, on the 28th May, giving an account of a steamboat accident, which occurred at that place on the 25th, attended with a greater loss of life than any disaster of the kind we ever heard of.

Church Struck.—The Sullivan (N. Y.) Whig, states that in a severe thunder storm on Sunday week during the church service, the Presbyterian church near the village of Liberty in that county, was struck by lightning, which knocked down some ten or twelve of the congregation. None were killed on the spot.

NEWSPAPERS.

A newspaper is a history of the day, a map of the time; a record of the hopes and feelings and passions of the hour. It is the common receptacle of all that is good—or that is bad in life; of the good that is wise, ridiculous, venerable, dignified or abominable. It displays human nature in every position,—and in every disguise, it is the representation, and the mirror of the character of the nation.

and impalpable being, the public, is the public in miniature. It assumes the shape of Potemkin; it looks about with the eyes of Argos and retelling forth its own tale, it is everywhere, it is all-reach, and mixing it all into a heterogeneous amalgam, spreads it out before the world. The grave, the great, the important, the useful, the noble, the ridiculous, and their places in the world, the whole of our pages."

"Whatever your disposition, whatever your result, you are certain of finding in this book a new and interesting One. One paragraph informs you of the death of your nearest friends; and the next advises you to buy a new book, while the editor declares to be the funniest, that the funniest of all is the funniest. It assures you that latter is sailing at this present pound. You are told in this paragraph that an insurance has broken out in Catalonia, and that the thermometer is eight degrees below zero. It slides, "Mr. Editor, I have been appointed minister plenipotentiary and envoy extraordinary to the court of St. Cloy, and I have been sentenced to ten years of imprisonment for life." It ends with "Verily, the ten paragraphs take about the same amount of paper, and I do not see how it can be helped."

A does not seem to be viewed in the of the printer's devil, as a more important personage than Mr. B. Each is him about three lines of copy. The news of a change of Ministry in England is confirmed; and the report that Mr. Smith had lost her favor is also contradicted. An engagement has taken place between a Mexican and Texan vessel and the crop of broom corn, owing to late frosts, will be unusually short.

With what anxiety the appearance of the newspaper was awaited at the fast pace, and how pleasant to embrace lamp shade, while the printing is smoldering, and the water hissing at the boiler, and the water evaporating, and the water swells into impetuous foam, and the advertisement, the ship news, and if it were hissing, hissing, hissing, hissing.

congress, especially assumes a temporal interest: "This too, this new novel is in the middle of the letter with the just brooding and forgotten—the last half of the letter under discussion falls upon list ears, for what can you read about, what can you talk about, that you will not find discussed in the novel?"

At last, says the head of the family, eminent merchant, as he glanced at the column headed "commercial," three days later from Europe.

"What news, papa?" asks his young daughter Julia.

"News," says indeed: is the reply. "It is up a hi'penny—more doing than bread and sugar for our last six weeks."

"What is your sight, papa," I care abt sugar and cotton? Is any body married?" Oh yes, continues Julia, by which is meant, "Is any body sleeping over at father's shoulder, into a corner of a pipe?" Mrs. Wilkins is married to

He is ashamed of her; says aunt Dorcas, sits at the other end of the table, entertains an old maid's horror of Green—prays is that a recipe for talismans out of silk that I see close to your flimsy dress.

What's the news from Ohio? says the eldest son, Thomas, who having, once more, offered to go to the States, taken to politics; and has to be kept of night by his father, who has been in the quarrel, and now is a confirmed radical. He has a variety of fevers, and all contrary opinions entertained at the same time by a newspaper are incredible. It regrets to hear that Mr. Brown has broken his leg; rejoices to understand our enterprising fellow citizen, Mr. S.

It is astonished and filled with indignation at hearing that our representative in congress has voted for the Misquahquamish and predicts its consequences. The speedy dissolution of our government and the destruction of our social order while you are lamenting such a glorious cause. The day is coming when the world will soon come to an end. MEDICATED LOZENGES.
THESE celebrated Lozenges are now offered to the citizens of Nauvoo and the West, as the best preparation (for the cure of the various diseases for which they are recommended) ever offered to the public. The proprietor, Dr. Sherman, is a regular graduate of Medicine, a member of the Medical Society of the city and county of New York, and these Lozenges are prepared from medical prescriptions which have been approved by the most celebrated physicians in that city; in addition to which they are prepared in the pleasant manner that renders them easy of swallowing, and they are taken with avidity, and cry out for more. They consist of WORM LOZENGES.

The only infallible Worm medicine ever discovered. In over 400,000 cases they have never been known to fail. Many diseases arise from worms and occasion long and intense suffering and even death without their ever being suspected; grown persons are very often afflicted with them and are doctored for various complaints without any benefit, when one dose of these Lozenges would speedily cure them.

CATHARTIC LOZENGES.
The best Cathartic medicine for removing bile from the system and preventing attacks of the bilious and intermittant fever of this section of country.
