ed. Of course I believed him, and it was agreed that we should meet negain.

Next morning, soon as the break fast things had been cleared away, I found I Imbbard and, a friend of his waiting for me at one of the card tables, and I took my seat with the hope of getting even, a hope which has led many a man into irretrievable ruin. I felt quite confident of winning back my losings over night, and my playmates gave me every encouragement that I should be successful. At it we went, playing with varying lack for about two hours. At abort 11 o'cloc! Hubbard's fciend left us for a few moments, to get a drink, and the jailor and unvself were left playing single-handed. When the third hand left, we were using the 'small cards,' as they were called—wise and under; but Hubbard immediately proposed that we should take the 'large cards,' — tens and over, which I agreed to as a matter of course. One thing here observed—my friend the jailor, dealt the cards arithout shadjing. This made me resolve to watch him closely. Taking up my cards, I was agreeably surprised to find that I held an excellent hand. "Now," Uniks I to myself, is the time if ever, to get even; if my adversary only happens to have a decent hand, I shall do well enough. The reader who does not understand the game of 'bloff'—or 'poker' as it is more generally called—may as well leave of here.]

I commenced the game by bragging a dollar—my alversary want than and five better, I went that and ten, he immediately put up a ten and laid down a twenty, keeping his pocket book out, as much as to say, 'I am ready to go any amount you choose to bet.' After a moments reflection, (all acting!) I said, 'I got that and fifty,' 'All right,' replied the jailor, there up is—I go that and a hundred.' I here looked at my cards again, and affected to have great doubts whether is should go the hundred. 'Take back your has bet,' I urged, it is too much for either of us to lose; I begin to think I have been too rash—take it back, and let us show our hands for the money already up? 'No!' said Hubbard, 'if you mean spocing, put up the hundred, or back out, and give me the money.' 'Can't do that,' I replied.' don't come from a backing ou champaigne at my exprese.

It is scarcely necessary to say, that should go the hundred. Take back your last bet, I treed, it is too much for either of us to lose; I begin to think I have been too rash—take it back. The Phenomena of the Brein.—One of the unset inconceivable things in the nature of the brein, is that the origin of sensition should sket be intensible. The cut the brain gives on pain, yet in the brein alone resides the power of fedging pain in any other part of the body. It has never which leads, to it from the incorrect part by commonation with a become instantiated by commonation with the leafs that any kind of sensition is produced yet the origin tiest in intensible. But there is a circumstance more winderful still. The from resift may be runored, may be cut away down to the corpus calastim, without destroying life. The national items and performs all those functions which are necessary to simple wisdiffy, but has no longer a mirely it cannot bind, are tell in requires that the food should be pushed into its stomath, once there, in three more than the food should be pushed into its stomath, once there, in three more than the food should be pushed into its stomath, once there, in their or the part of the brain called the convolutions, is simply intended for the kercese of, thus intelect and facilities, whether of the low degree called intensive. convolutions, is simply intended the convolutions, is simply intended for the kavenee of this intellect and f-culties whether of the low degree ca led instinct or of that exalted kind bestowed on man the gift of reeson.— Wigan on the Dura hilling of the Mad.

Captain Rogers also stated that he remained in Cape Greg ary Bay five days, and built them a comfortable home for the winter.—Repub.

Warm weather in Paris.—The Feanch papers complain of the unusualitiest of the weather in Paris. On the 14th June, the atmosphere was close to sufficiation. In some of the bakers' shops they had to wait unit night to begin their work. Even then some of the back were collised to quit. some of the boys were obliged to quit work for tear of suffication from the heat. The next day people had to wait until a late hour for their breakfirst, and then content themselves bread fresh from the oven.
